City Council, Animal Control Recognize Shelter Volunteers

by Kathleen Gallagher

The first thing that must be said is that although Billy and Jimmy stole the show, they were not allowed to be part of the group picture. (More on them below.) Fortunately, the two individuals being honored by the Greenbelt City Council and the city's animal control program at the April 7 council meeting were not far behind in the charm department.

Emily Mansilla, owner of Grooming by Em in Bladensburg, and Theo Luce, a high school student and former Greenbelt resident who has been volunteering at the animal shelter for his community service requirement, were both recognized for their work with the shelter. Celia Craze, director of the Department of Planning and Community Development, which houses animal control, first introduced Animal Control Officers Lauren Crossed and Howard Stanback and then the honorees.

Mansilla

Craze said Mansilla has been an active supporter of the animal control program and the shelter for more than five years. She has donated grooming services

Artful Afternoon Entertains And Challenges Participants

by Jaclyn Turner

Greenbelt families brought their children to the monthly Artful Afternoon at the Community Center on April 6. Artist-in-residence Karen Arrington, whose specialty is pottery and graphic design, helped participants make a woven basket out of newspaper.

"I like to use recycled products," Arrington said. "Do something familiar but unique. It's 3D and coming from something that is not the original shape. I found the idea through Pinterest."

"This is the best thing I've done," declared 9-year-old Rebecca Gardner. "It's challenging, but I'm having fun."

"I love art and it's fun," said regular Artful Afternoon attendee Thelma Forte, 74. "I'm gonna make my grandkids do this this summer. It's a good way to get rid of the old newspaper."

"It's the best thing to do of all of the things to do today," said

Matt Holland, father of Jonah, 5 and Maggie, 8, who participate monthly in Artful Afternoon.

Maggie Holland described her favorite event to date as the wax-dream cave that sits near the entrance of the Community Center.

Helpers

Miss Greenbelt, Sarah Larkin, 17, and Junior Miss Greenbelt, Yasmine Switzer, 13, were present to help younger children with the project. "I love working with kids. It's nice to give back to the community," Larkin said.

"We try to think of art projects that are out of the ordinary," said artist Nora Simon, who last month taught the art workshop. This month she demonstrated screen-printing triangles on note-cards in her studio on the second floor of the Community Center.

"A lot of school teachers will come in and use our project ideas," Mary Gawlik, another resident artist said. "We have a small budget, use only a few materials and try to do things suitable for all ages."

Guests were also welcome to peruse the studio open-house and meet with the nine in-house resident artists, who rent out spaces in the Community Center to practice their craft, whether painting, silk-screening or pottery. The artists, who spend about 25 hours a month at the studio, have open studio hours for guests to browse and purchase their crafts.

Gawlik enthusiastically showed off favorite ceramic-tile pieces she had created and discussed her technique, including her favorite, best-kept secret. Gawlik had created a stamp on a piece of fabric with puffy paint, which when dry imprints in the clay looking as though she had

by Tisha Claudia Lim

Most residents are familiar with the Greenbelt Library but may only have passed by the Frederick S. DeMarr Library on the first floor. Although the DeMarr library is located within the Greenbelt Library, the two are not associated.

Named for Frederick S. DeMarr, long-time president and devoted member of the Prince George's County Historical Society (PGCHS), the library was established by the society and serves as a research center of the county's history. It specializes in a variety of materials relating not only to the county but also to the State of Maryland and the City of Greenbelt.

The DeMarr Library moved to the lower level of Greenbelt Library in 2008 after being offered to the county library system. The library previously was located in the basement at Marietta, the Glenn Dale home of Gabriel Duvall, an early 19th-century Supreme Court justice. The library includes much of the private collection of DeMarr.

The collection was legally conveyed and donated to the Society in 1999, two years after DeMarr's death, according to Susan Pearl, the society's historian.

Pearl said that DeMarr had made it clear before he died this collection was going to the historical society.

The library is run entirely by volunteers and currently has 6,000 volumes on a range of subjects – architecture, educational institutions, military history and more. Due to the large number of subjects and volume, the space is getting tight, Pearl said.

"We are getting crowded but at least here we have space to walk. At Marietta there was no space at all, so we are very happy here," Pearl said.

In addition, the library is home to many historical archives and records including historical maps, atlases, journals, periodicals, newspapers, biographies and photos as well as files on subjects, people, places and past

David Craig Scholarship Deadline Is April 30

by Douglas A. Magnum

The David Craig Memorial Scholarship Fund Application Deadline (DCMSF) will be Wednesday, April 30.

The Craig Scholarship Fund wants city residents and the Eleanor Roosevelt High School (ERHS) communities to know this local scholarship is available to all ERHS seniors. One recipient has been selected each year for over 29 years. The current scholarship, for $10,000, is paid over a four year period.

Two current recipients are attending the University of Maryland and the University of Maryland at Baltimore County. This year's recipient will be presented the first payment of $2,500 at the ERHS senior awards ceremony on May 15 in the school auditorium.

The Craig Scholarship tradition began in 1986 as a tribute and memorial to David Craig, a 1979 ERHS graduate whose tragic death in 1984 sparked a desire by his family and friends for a lasting memorial and a rewarding response by helping others with education expenses.

The DCMSF is totally funded by private donations and gifts and is a nonprofit organization recognized by the State of Maryland. To apply or to learn more about the fund, visit davidraigmsf.blogspot.com. The telephone number is 301-474-7874.

Douglas Magnum is the president of the David Craig Memorial Scholarship Foundation.

Something Special

Sitting with Chris Cherry and Stefan Brodd at the Alight Dance program Saturday, we found ourselves simultaneously asking "How can something so special occur within walking distance of our, albeit humble, abodes?"

Improvisational and inspirational, the performance created magic that continued long afterward.

And Angella Foster! How did our community come to warrant your genius?

Congratulations. And thank you.

Explore French Cooking on April 25

On Friday, April 25 the Explorations Unlimited speaker will be Kofi Otchere talking about French Cooking Made Easy.

He says although French cooking comes with scary words like "classical" and "haute cuisine," it is at core very simple. Of course French chefs use many complex tricks to get their famous cuisine to look and taste just so; key is learning their cooking methods. Since coming to the United States in 1978, Otchere has worked in restaurants and now shares his cooking experience with those nostalgic about a loss of French cooking.

Otchere says French cooking is learned step by step, interweaving skills, learning one technique and then layering other methods over it until feeling confident and free. His presentation will start with basics from making one's own stock pot, different basic sources, desserts and picking ingredients for the recipes. He relates that he has hung around kitchens since age 16, from working as a dish washer in Mediterranean cruise ships to eight years working with his mentor, Pierre Chevalier at his Chevalier Restaurants in Paris and Lyon.

Explorations Unlimited is held every Friday from 1 to 3 p.m. at the Greenbelt Community Center. Otchere's presentation will be held in room 114. All are welcome to attend; questions are encouraged.

For more information call 301-397-2208.

White Cane Days Next Weekend

Next weekend on Friday, Saturday and Sunday the Greenbelt Lions Club will hold one of its four-times-a-year weekend donation collections on the Greenbelt Co-op ramp and outside the Safeway at Greenway.

Members of the club will collect money that is used to help people acquire eyeglasses, to support the Wilmer Eye Clinic at Johns Hopkins University and to support Camp Merrick, the Lions Club summer camp for children who are visually handicapped or with chronic medical conditions. They also help support the Lions' Leader Dog School in Rochester, Mich. All money raised goes to these Lions-supported activities.

Mishkan Torah Holds Jewelry Sale April 27

Next Sunday, April 27 from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. is the date for this year's annual jewelry sale of recycled costume and antique jewelry.

The vintage jewelry sale is always scheduled before Mother's Day so children can make purchases for gifts. All items are reasonably priced – starting at 25 cents and up, depending on the item.

The annual event began 11 years ago when Mishkan Torah received a large bequest of costume jewelry. That original sale was so enjoyable and successful it was decided to hold a similar sale each year. There will also be a repair station for minor jewelry repairs.

Mishkan Torah is at 10 Ridge Road at the corner of Westway and Ridge.

Obituaries

Antonio Fominaya III

Antonio (Tony) Fominaya III, 65, died peacefully on April 10, 2014, in the arms of his loving family.

Mr. Fominaya was born on January 23, 1949, in Topeka, Kansas. Son of Antonio Fominaya II and Lydia (Price) Fominaya, Tony was the first of three boys born into a military family. He traveled with his family all over the United States. He spent three years in Zaragoza, Spain, and moved to Greenbelt in the summer of 1964. Mr. Fominaya soon met Ken Voigt, who became his life-long friend and later introduced him to his wife and soulmate of over 40 years, Kathleen (Foster) Fominaya.

Mr. Fominaya was a systems analyst working with many government agencies and contractors. He was a habitual explorer, constantly looking for the wonders of the world through photography, communications, intellect and beyond. He was a hobbyist in photography, capturing images that he loved of nature and his family, which then decorated their lives; particularly photos of his family vacations. He was dedicated to his wife and her seven younger brothers and sisters, adding another "BIG" brother to the family. Tony was the man with all the tools and gadgets. He loved when he had the opportunity to work on a new project with his family. He often bragged about helping to build Tim's log house in Deep Creek.

Mr. Fominaya was active in his local community. He volunteered for many years at the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival helping his best friend Ken with the sound and stage, organizing the parade and serving as a parade marshal with Central Maryland Amateur Radio Club. Mr. Fominaya was very active in the Greenbelt Community Church, designing the first website for the church, singing in the choir, working on many committees and serving as moderator. His favorite activity with the church was the annual Christmas in April project where he was able to use his love and knowledge of tools and construction to help those in need. Mr. Fominaya's decorations for Halloween and Christmas were always the talk of the community; who else put up Christmas cows?

He is survived by his wife, Kathy; his children: Antonio IV and Brooke (Belmont, Mich.); Christopher (Hyattsville); Mary and Jason Doane (Greenbelt); grandchildren: Sofia and Antonio Fominaya and Tyler and Madison Doane; his brothers: Terry (Falling Waters, W.V.), Eloy and Suzie (Valparaiso, Fla.); his "In-Laws": Pat, Mike and Ann, Kevin, Tim and Tess, Danny and Judy Foster; Tricia and Gary Mumford, Anne and Bill Seek, Lou and Marge Shifflett and nearly 40 nieces and nephews.

A celebration of his life will be held on Saturday, April 19 at the Greenbelt Community Church at noon with interment immediately following the service in the Memorial Grove.

A reception will follow the Greenbelt Memorial Service in the Social Hall of the Church. Memorial contributions can be made to the Greenbelt Community Church – Christmas in April Project, 1 Hillside Road, Greenbelt, Maryland 20770.

Deepest sympathy to the family and friends of Tony Fominaya, 65, who died on April 10, 2014. He was a longtime Greenbelter and an active member of the Community Church.

Condolences to Joyce Mangum and her family on the death of Joyce's sister Doris Bates Barnes, 91, on March 15, 2014, in Andover, Minn. Doris, Joyce and their late brother Richard were the children of pioneer Greenbelters Harry A. and Winifred Bates.

Congratulations to

– Stephanie Beatty, daughter of Patricia Warren and Steven Beatty of Greenbelt, who has been named a member of the National Society of Collegiate Scholars (NSCS) in her first year at Old Dominion University. NSCS is the nation's only interdisciplinary honors organization for first- and second-year college students. Stephanie is a graduate of Elizabeth Seton High School.

– Eleanor Roosevelt High School chemistry teacher Coit Hendley, named the Washington Post Prince George's Teacher of the Year. He had the highest number of African American students pass the AP chemistry exam in the country – in 2006, 2008, 2009 and 2010.

– On March 15, 2014, the Mangum family was blessed with the birth of little Madeline Grace in Baltimore. She is the sixth great-grandchild for Joyce; grandpa is Greenbelter Doug Mangum.

– Former Greenbelter Tate MacQueen, now a candidate seeking election to the U.S. House of Representatives as a Democrat from North Carolina's 10th District, who appears in the next Reel & Meal at the New Deal film "My Toxic Backyard." and will be one of the discussion speakers afterward. MacQueen was on national radio on The Norman Goldman Show this week as well as being interviewed in March for a USA Today article on the case featured in the film.

– Greenbelter David Alexander, who won the Toastmasters Area 44 International Speech contest March 23. The award, for individual club winners from six Toastmaster clubs in and near Greenbelt. He continues on to the Division D contest May 1 that pits the best speakers from 28 clubs in northern Prince George's County.

We hope everybody is enjoying the beautiful spring, so welcome after that snowy winter. Greenbelt abounds with daffodils, tulips and flowering trees – first the magnolias, then the Bradford pears and now the beautiful cherry blossoms. My special favorites are the cherry on Crescent Road near 58 court, this year festooned with colorful Easter eggs, and the weeping cherry beside St. Hugh's rectory.

Next Reel-n-Meal Is Toxic Backyard

Monday, April 21 at 7 p.m., the next monthly Reel & Meal in the New Deal Café film series will show the Mid-Atlantic premiere of the documentary "My Toxic Backyard." The free event, held at the Café and sponsored by Beaverdam Creek Watershed Watch Group, Green Vegan Networking and the Prince George's County Peace and Justice Coalition, is preceded by availability of a special vegan buffet for purchase at 6:30 p.m.

My Toxic Backyard, by Emmy award-winning filmmaker Katie Damien, is the story of CTS, a corporation that manufactures sensors, actuators and electronic components, which inspired citizens in North Carolina to fight back after their rural community was contaminated.

The film was conceived when Damien was house-hunting and stumbled on a neighborhood in south Asheville with a high rate of cancer. Haunted by the situation, she dug into the story and five years later produced the documentary. Chronicling how the CTS-South Asheville Superfund site was leaking toxic chemicals into the surrounding groundwater, she follows the community's struggle for clean, safe water and highlights several of its families. Aaron Penland opens the film by pointing to victims in a family film he calls a "death video." There is Shannon Mead, whose constant illness forced her to miss the first seven years of her eldest child's life.

And Tate MacQueen, who moved to Greenbelt with his wife, Bethan, and their two young children to get away from the water.

It took 30 years from their initial assessment for EPA to declare the CTS site as one of the 46,000 Superfund sites. In 2012 CTS was ranked among the worst sites in the country, with at least 74 known cases of cancer.

With one of every four Americans living within a four-mile radius of a Superfund site, the proximity of toxic waste potentially affects many in terms of the water they drink, the air they breathe and the ground on which they live.

The discussion afterward will be led by Tate MacQueen, former Greenbelter and current Democratic candidate for North Carolina Congressional District 10, who is featured in the film. For over six years he has advocated in Raleigh and Washington, D.C. for those affected. The Justice Department case of CTS Corp. v. Waldburger featuring Tate and 23 other plaintiffs is to be heard by the Supreme Court on April 23.

Mary Wang sat in her studio working on a canvas with a honeycomb design. "Right now I'm experimenting with layers. I don't have a final look in mind . . . something with natural objects," she said.

She had just completed a series of canvases with crows based on the story of the raven that stole the sun.

for shelter dogs, organized food drives and fundraisers, housed animals temporarily and provided long-term fostering for both cats and dogs. Recently she decided to give one of her fosters a forever home.

Asked to say a few words, Mansilla talked about how much she loves her work and how loving one's work inevitably gives rise to a deep commitment to contribute. Mayor Emmett Jordan presented her with a plaque recognizing her contribution to Greenbelt.

Luce

Craze said that while Luce has undertaken a number of tasks at the shelter, he has focused on socializing animals awaiting adoption, especially cats and pocket pets . . . which brings us back to Billy and Jimmy, two white ferrets who were rescued from a dumpster by MPO Kelly Lawson of the Police Department and are now Luce's special protégés at the shelter.

Billy and Jimmy accompanied Luce at the podium until the strong interest of Billy (or was that Jimmy?) in the microphone caused the two to be moved out of range by Stanback and Crossed. Luce, who will graduate this year from the Harbour School in Annapolis, said he wanted to work at the Greenbelt shelter for his senior volunteer project because his family still enjoys Greenbelt, even though they don't live here anymore and because this is a no-kill shelter. He said it has been a very enjoyable place to work.

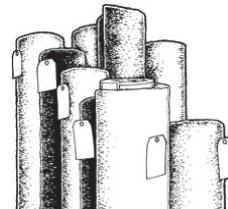

Luce also gave a rundown on upcoming animal control events, including the designation of April as the Real House Cats of Greenbelt Feline Frenzy Month, Kitten Shower (May 6), a 24-hour Adopt-a-thon (April 26) and the Greenbelt Pet Expo Block Party, which this year will be held on June 7 on Hanover Drive in the block adjacent to the Greenbelt Dog Park. Craze added that more details will be publicized as events come up.

events, according to Pearl and a brochure about the library. "We have a good collection of maps . . . a lot of people come here just to look at maps," she said.

"What we do with [this documentation] is that we arrange items according to the Library of Congress system, from letter A all the way to letter Z," she said. "We are also working on getting them online," she added.

The library has also made improvements by receiving valuable and useful equipment from the University of Maryland Baltimore School of Law library through the help of one of the DeMarr Library volunteers (who is also a Greenbelt resident), Clement Lau, according to a letter from the library. The library has benefited from three microfilm readers, small library supplies, a photocopier, bookshelves and bookstands, according to Pearl.

"These are all gifts . . . and they have been very helpful to the library," Pearl said.

The library, which has been referenced as "the jewel" of the historical society, is frequented by many people and researchers who are interested in knowing and collecting information about the county and the state. As this reporter was interviewing Pearl, she received a phone call from a man who was coming from Baltimore to visit the library. She also told me that she has an appointment with another person from Kentucky.

Pearl said the library is often packed with people. "We often have standing room only with a lot of people coming in to do research projects and family genealogies," Pearl said.

Recently the library has also been contacted by the county Parks and Recreation Department requesting historical photographs. The community affairs director for County Executive Rushern Baker visited the library, requesting historical facts about the county, according to Pearl.

The library also provides volunteer opportunities for those interested in learning about the different tasks in a library.

The DeMarr Library is open on Saturdays from noon to 4 p.m. Appointments are encouraged for weekdays or if other times are preferred. For details call 301-220-0330 or email pgchslibrary@aol.com.

If Roosevelt is victorious Thursday, they will face the winner of the competition between Richard Montgomery High and Franklin High. The final will be held Friday, April 25 at 10 a.m., in Annapolis at the Court of Appeals, Maryland's highest court. The final is also broadcast live at www.clrep.org/mock-trial-competition.html.

Co-exist with Wildlife Pointers from “Control”

Living in a suburban, highly wooded community like Greenbelt, it is commonplace to see wildlife in the yard and neighborhoods, especially in the spring when a new generation begins exploring its world.

Greenbelt Animal Control receives dozens of calls from residents concerned about seeing wildlife and dealing with their activities. Calls are received daily about animals in trash cans, around outdoor pet food containers and even on birdfeeders.

To understand wildlife, it is important to realize that wild animals do not recognize the boundaries of private yards. Wildlife acts on hunger and shelter drives that are instinctual and when these animals are spotted by residents, it is probably because the animal is acting on those instincts, and not because of illness or aberrant behavior.

Likely animal visitors range from squirrels to raccoons, include feral or outdoor cats and may include opossum intruders. Animal Control Officer Susie Hall says many people jump to the assumption that a sick or rabid animal is raiding their garbage, but usually “these are healthy animals doing what healthy animals do,” she says.

Healthy and inquisitive raccoons are much more likely to be the culprits in a trash can raid than a rabid animal. Sometimes raccoons have even broken through lidded trash containers with bungee cords wrapped around them, according to Hall, who points to the raccoons’ opposable thumbs as the reason for their success.

Unlike raccoons, foxes are not in the habit of breaking into people’s trash containers, says Hall, who has never had a case of a fox getting into a garbage can.

The local animal most likely to do a sleepover in a trash can is the opossum – they are notorious for getting into garbage containers and then falling asleep, she said.

Garbage Cans

Since so much household waste contains food, garbage becomes an easy target for any animal searching for food. Hall remarks, “We set up our neighborhoods with garbage like a fast-food restaurant for animals. We can’t expect them not to take advantage of it.”

As for fears of rabid animals, Hall considers this unlikely. A rabid animal suffers a loss of appetite, loses coordination and has diminished motor skills, according to Hall. “These animals are not taking the time and effort to get into garbage cans,” she says.

Hall says a few safeguards will stop most animals. “Don’t just set out garbage bags,” Hall says. “Secure containers properly. Usually a lid is enough to prevent problems, with bungee cords to fasten the lid to the trash can.”

If wild animals are visiting the yard or neighborhood, make sure there is no source of food to attract them.

Greenbelt Animal Control does not trap and remove healthy wildlife. On the other hand, if an animal gets stuck or an opossum decides to sleep in, Hall says that animal control will remove animals from trash cans or dumpsters. Animal Control should also be contacted if a wild animal gets into the home.

Remember that most wild animals around homes in Greenbelt are nothing more than visitors looking for a meal. If the animal does not find food, it will move along and look for its food elsewhere.

Five Students Present at ERHS Symposium

The symposium will begin at 11:45 in the auditorium. Five students were selected through an audition process to present their research to an audience of students, parents and researchers. This year’s students are Arianna Cooper, Jennifer Hill, Jonathan Jackson, Katherine Monroe and Shawn Reginald.

Posters showing the projects will be on display in the Media Center in the school from Wednesday, April 23 through Friday, April 25.

Democratic Club Has Busy Agenda

Greenbelt’s state delegation will present its annual legislative session report card Friday, April 25, at 7:30 p.m., at the Greenbriar Community Building.

The Eleanor & Franklin Roosevelt Democratic Club is hosting the gathering of Senator Paul Pinsky and Delgates Gaines, Healey and Washington to review issues and legislative actions, such as decriminalizing the possession or use of less than 10 grams of marijuana, increasing the minimum wage to $10.10/hour and restoring more highway user funds for Maryland’s cities. This is an opportunity for area residents to learn why certain legislative proposals gathered sufficient support and others were left for the next session in Annapolis.

A weekend later, the club will once again participate in the annual CROP Hunger Walk around Lake Artemesia on Sunday afternoon, May 4. Anyone who would like to help support the effort can make out a tax-deductible check to CROP (Communities Responding to Overcome Poverty). Or come “walk the walk.” Join the club at the parking lot of the former 94th Aerosquadron Restaurant, 5240 Paint Branch Parkway. The walk officially begins at 1:30 p.m.

The funds, contributed toward the Church World Service, go to help refugees from war and/or natural disasters throughout the globe and to the hungry here in Prince George’s County. For more information call Lyn or Bob Doyle at 301-328-7598.

Local Attorney Fajer-Smith Is among Md.'s Top Women

by Sam Stern

The Daily Record recently named Greenbelt attorney Debora Fajer-Smith as one of "Maryland's Top 100 Women" in 2014.

Fajer-Smith, an attorney with the Ivy Lane Greenbelt law firm of Joseph Greenwald & Laake, heads the firm's Worker's Compensation group specializing in Worker's Compensation, along with personal injury cases. This is the second time Fajer-Smith has been honored by The Daily Record as one of the Top 100 women in Maryland, with her initial award coming in 2007.

The Daily Record is a newspaper published in Baltimore that covers legal and business information. The publication holds eight annual award events in an effort to be active in the community.

"I think this award is significant in Maryland as it pertains to women because I believe in Maryland there is a very good women's network, people trying to advance each other's careers and work in a collaborative way," said Fajer-Smith.

Six judges who hold various positions in prominent Maryland organizations choose the top 100 women. The judges, who change every year, are prominent Maryland business people and former Top 100 women. "People can go on our website and fill out a nomination form and then those who are nominated are notified through an email . . . We have about 380 nominations and about 350 send in applications," said Claire Sheehan, operations and events assistant for The Daily Record.

Prospective winners must reside in Maryland, cannot win in consecutive years and are eligible to be named to the "Circle of Excellence" after three wins. The judges consider achievements in the professional field, commitment to volunteer service and time spent mentoring others.

There is first a preliminary judging round that consists of 30 judges who group nominees into a final round of selection.

"I have spent a lifetime making sure that I mentor whoever I can . . . as I go along the way I feel that that is a genuine obligation," said Fajer-Smith.

Fajer-Smith attended the University of Maryland at College Park where she received her bachelor's degree. She then attended the University of Maryland School of Law in Baltimore. Fajer-Smith has earned many awards throughout her law career, including being named a Top 150 Plaintiff Woman Attorney.

Fajer-Smith, a native of Brazil, immigrated to the United States as a child and considers this a driving force for her career in law. "Once we arrived in the United States, a dictatorship in Brazil took over. I guess my appreciation for our democracy, our appreciation for our government, for rule of law came to me at a very early age," said Fajer-Smith.

The Daily Record will recognize this year's winners at Joseph Meyerhoff Symphony Hall in Baltimore on Monday, May 5.

Sam Stern is a University of Maryland journalism student currently writing for the News Review.

At its April 7 regular meeting, the city council honored Eleanor Roosevelt High School (ERHS) teacher Josephine Michael, who obtained National Board Certification this school year. Certification takes up to three years to complete and requires rigorous performance-based assessment of teaching skills and content knowledge. ERHS Principal Reginald McNeill said more than 20 ERHS faculty have now achieved certification.
